Serious and Amusing Scenes in Parliament During the Week.

STANLEY MAKES HIS DEBUT

Gossip in Regard to the Abelition of the Office of Lord Lieutement in Irchard, Proposed Royal Residence In That Country, and About London Theaters.

London, Aug. 24. The time of the House of Commons this week has been mainly occupied with discomions of foreign matters, chiefly points relating to Egypt, Slam and Armenia, during which Mr. Henry M. Stanley, the African explorer and formerly a New York reporter, now member for the North Lambeth division of London in the Unionist Interest, made his mudden speech in the house.

Mr. Starley tose to this effort of his life during a discussion of the Egyptian question, and he strongly defended the propositions looking to an evacuation of Egyptian territory by the British troops. His first effort to parliament was equal to his reputation, and, contrary to general usage on the occasion of maiden speeches, there was nearly a full house; or, about as full as it could be considering the deserted goodition of London.

The members present listened to the new | change, as the office of Lord Lieutenaut of | one cent.

Mr. Stanley was attired in a well-fitting light gray frock coat. His utterance was rather thick, but he spoke rapidly and to the point. The explorer, it was noticed, was much hurt when Mr. James Parker Smith, Unionist member for the Patrick division of Lanarkshire, who spoke on the same subject later in the day, intimated that Mr. Stanley was trading on his reputation as an explorer of Africa. The latter, subsequently, warmly repudiated this assertion.

AMUSING INCIDENTS. There were some amusing incidents in the House of Commons during the week arising out of the new members' ignorance of the rules. On Thursday, for instance, a member walked up the floor of the House wearing his bat, while the chairman was in the chair. When he was greeted with a Vivandiere," by the late Benjamin Godard, general cry of "order," he looked innocently around to see who had offended, until he discovered his own mistake, and then he was ready to collapse with embar-

Baron Castletown, Liberal, has been interviewed in regard to the announcement of his intention to move a resolution in the House of Lorda early next session to abolish the office of lord lieutenant of Ireland and in place of that official to appoint a chief under secretary for Ireland, and to pray the Queen to establish a royal residence in that country. He said be believed such action would forge closer the links binding the two countries and would give an immense impetus to the development of the natural resources of the country and encourage tourists to visit Ireland.

A ROYAL RESIDENCE. There is good reason to believe that the suggestion will receive favorable consider-ficult to fill. Regarding the proposition to establish a royal residence in Ireland, the impression prevails that the ministers and others would prefer to see a royal residence in the south or west of Ireland, where it would be likely to do more good than in Dublin, which, it is added, might be visited several times yearly by members of the royal family. Should the change take place it is proposed to convert Dublin castle into a museum.

The Queen is going to Palmoral on Tues-day next; but it is not expected that she will stay in Scotland any great length of THEATRICAL GOSSIP. Sir Augustus Harris, while in Paris recently, acquired the right to produce in Covent Garden next season the opera "Li with Mile. Delna in the chief part. At Covent Garden the role will probably be played by Madame Calve,

The libretto to this opera is by M. Henri Cain, the author of "La Navarraise," and deals with events in the revolutionary war of 1794, an elderly marquis taking the royalist and his son the republican side. Madame Calve will have her best opportunities in the second act, particularly in the second scene, in which the vivandiere for the first time hears a prayer from the lips of a young girl she has befriended, and the equally touching situation in which, on the eve of battle, an illiterate letter which he has just received from his aged mother.
